

SETTIMO CIELO / LA CULLA

Two sections located within a short distance from one another. The “Settimo Cielo” slabs have not too difficult routes, from 3 to 4 pitches. The “Culla” routes instead are shorter and more challenging. Both sections have a really nice and abrasive rock. The access is not the easiest one, but if you’re able to follow the right way it’s not too long and can even be enjoyable (despite the high grass and thorny vegetation).

Access: From Bodengo, by the fountain at the end of the village, you must ascend the grassy hill behind it – along the side of the creek – following a track through the vegetation until meeting a nice path coming from the right side. Follow it, cross the creek and continue on the steep and quite pronounced path. When arrived to a small open space the path bends to the left, still ascending. After reaching a second creek go up the grassy hill in the “Culla” section direction walking around its base. To reach the “Settimo Cielo” slabs continue following an ascending band with a few easy steps on the rocks (long pants recommended).

(Picture: climbing Angelik route 6c)

